Heterogeneous Economic Effects of Mega-Events: Evidence from F1 Grand Prix Grade: A−

- Matched Formula 1 Grand Prix races (2010–2025) with Eurostat hotel data for 10 EU host countries and Google Trends search data across 34 circuits.
- Estimated two channels with different information timing: a 10-point reduction in the pre-race championship gap raises same-month foreign arrivals by approximately 3.8% ($p = 0.020$), while race-day drama (DNFs, crashes, position changes) shows no robust effect; Google Trends analysis documents an attention–conversion gap from online interest to bookings.

Senior Thesis, Chung Chi College, CUHK 2025-26 Term 1

A Shrinking Future? Hong Kong's Fertility Crisis as a Sustainability Challenge Grade: A−

- Merit Prize, Green and Sustainable Paper Award.
- Combined time-series projections with an original survey ($N = 274$) and IV regression; identified housing costs and delayed marriage as key drags behind a projected TFR of 0.57 by 2030; proposed an integrated family policy package.
